

RECTOR'S REFLECTION

I am often asked about how I discerned my sense of call. I am sure that you have all heard the story more than once so I don't want to belabour it, but my answer usually touches on the following points. First, that I am not sure I had an epiphany (or aha! moment) when my sense of call crystallised for me, but that my discernment has been the work of a lifetime (and, indeed, that it continues). Second, that my sense of call is not only something that I discerned but that the community around me discerned, too. Finally, my call was one to ordination, where I would work for the Church, being a pastor and teacher, tending to the needs of God's people and equipping them to live out their own sense of call.

Now, what is your sense of call? What vocation do you have? We believe, because we read it in Scripture (especially in Paul's letters), that every Christian is endowed with gifts of the Spirit equal to the call that God places on our lives. A sense of call is not reserved to clergy alone, although it is true that the institutional Church has probably done a better job at developing mechanisms for discerning calls to ordained ministry than for lay ministry. If you can't answer the question about your own calling, as I did above, then that's something for you to reflect on.

Call is important. It's really at the heart of who we are. It started with the people of Israel when God called them to be his Chosen People, a nation that was set apart from other nations to live differently in the world. It continues to this day, as Christians are called to follow Jesus, setting ourselves in, but not of, the world, as we seek to live in ways that are faithful to God's vision of the kingdom rather than in servitude to the ways of the world.

We look to the example of the first disciples to see the profound effect of the call that Jesus places on us. In this week's Gospel reading, Mark recounts the calling of the first four: Simon (Peter), Andrew, James, and John. These working class men, all of them fishermen, were at their daily labour—fishing and mending nets—when Jesus passed them by. Now, they had likely heard him speaking, and as Doug reminded us last week when he was preaching on Jesus' encounter with Nathanael, they would certainly have heard what John the Baptist was saying about his cousin Jesus, so Jesus would not have been a completely unknown quantity to them. He would not have been, however, overly familiar, either. So, what happens next is pretty amazing. As he walks by these four men who are busy at their work, he calls to them and simply invites them to "Follow me". And they do, James and John even abandoning their father Zebedee in the boat to do the work himself!

We must not miss a crucial part of this story, though. Mark reminds us, before he tells us about Jesus calling out to Simon, Andrew, James, and John, that Jesus was going around Galilee proclaiming the good news of God and saying, "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God has come near; repent, and believe in the good news." The call of Jesus is not just an invitation to come along because he might promise a good time. It is predicated on hearing the invitation to repent—to turn away from those things that are contrary to his good news—before truly being able to follow. It means putting discipleship above everything else, even to the point where the sons of Zebedee left their father behind.

Discipleship is not a walk on the beach with Jesus. It is costly and difficult and often in opposition to many of the things we have been taught to value. But the true disciple knows that in God alone is hope and salvation. That God alone is our strong rock and our refuge. Knowing this, then, when Jesus invites you to follow him, how will you respond?
